WARRANTY SERVICE FAQ

- What is a "defective" product?
  - A product is considered defective if it does not meet its performance, manufacturing, or design specifications. An example would be a backpack buckle that comes undone while under a normal load. See our limited warranty statement above for a complete list of exclusions.

- Is my replacement product warranted?
  - A replacement item does not result in a new Warranty Period. Replacement products are provided to ensure product satisfaction through the remainder of the original Warranty Period for the original product.

- Will my product be replaced or repaired?
  - Black Diamond will first attempt to repair your product. If a repair is not possible, or not cost effective, then replacement will be considered. Products that are out of stock or discontinued will be replaced with the closest equivalent. Repairs are made in order to restore an item to the original functionality and may not necessarily result in a like-new appearance. Original products that are replaced through the warranty will not be returned to you.

- Do I need to send my product in?
  - Our Service Center Specialists will let you know if your product needs to be sent in. Shipping to Black Diamond will be at your own expense.

- How long will it take to get my gear back?
  - Service time can vary depending on the solution that is necessary. Typical service time can be as little as 1 week or up to 6 weeks for some cases. This time frame depends on the solution needed to resolve the claim.
• Are my cam triggers a warranty claim or should I pay for the re-trigger service?

  o Due to the highly variable usage and wear that a cam can face, cam trigger replacements will only be provided as a warranty service with a proof of purchase from an authorized seller within one (1) calendar year from the date of purchase by the original end user purchaser, as provided in full in the limited warranty statement above. If your cam is over one (1) year old, trigger replacements can be bought as a service or DIY kits can be purchased for most cam models.

• How do I contact Black Diamond about my warranty claim?

  o When you submit a claim, a service center representative will reach out to you and keep you updated on your claim. You can email them additional questions or information about your claim throughout the process.

• Can I get replacement parts if my product is outside of warranty?

  o Spare parts can be found for sale on our website. Due to practical limitations, Black Diamond only stocks select components for current products that we think are likely to need replacement within the product’s lifetime. Parts for older product will remain available until inventory is depleted.

• How do I know whether a seller is an “authorized” seller of your products?

  o If you have any questions regarding whether a seller is an authorized Black Diamond seller, please contact us at (800) 775-5552 or RArequests@bdel.com.

• How do I submit claims if I am outside of North America?

  o This limited warranty applies only to sales within the United States of America. Our network of distributors handles warranty claims in other regions. You can reach out to your local dealer to find out how to proceed or submit a claim here and it will be forwarded to the distributor in your region.
